The Canal Improvement.
The Louisville and Portland canal is a great source of misery to some member of the editorial staff of the Chicago Tri-bune. In this part of the country, and in fact from Pittsburgh to New Orleans, every-body as auxious to have the canal enlarged Chicago is entirely opposed to all such wishes. The name of our canal seems to affect him as the sight of water does a made dog. And when he comes to write on the subject, as he does several times in the course of a year, he writes like one bereft of his senses, and indulges in a reckless-ness of statement which is quite ness of statement which is quite unparalleled in our experience. In other words, the articles which have appeared from time to time in the Chicago Tribune about the Louisville and Portland canal, are shameful compounds of ignorance, gross misrep-resentation, and ill-nature.

We are told that "the Louisyllle and Portland canal is a disch a few miles long, and intended originally to provide means for steamboats to pass, at a low stage of water, around the falls of the Ohio river." Well, so it is a ditch, and an ugly one at that. But Gen. WEITZEL, of the engineer's corps, is rapidly transforming it into a fine and spacious ship channel, and when ompleted it will be such a work as the commerce of this tection absolutely re-quires should exist at this point of the ent down-at-the-heel condition that the progress of river transportation on the Ohio has not fully kept pace with the growth of our population and trade. The improvement which is now making was asked for fifteen yens ago, and the attention of Congress has been drawn to the subject almost every year since that time. Undoubtedly it was the intervention of the war that caused Congress to delay its action for so long a time. Since the close of the war the clamor for the enlargement has been revived, and as it comes from so vast a section of country we all feel quite sure that the work will not again be abandoned. Before another year has passed awny it is more than probable that Congress will authorize the Executive to assume possession and control of the canal, and thereby make it free to the commerce of the country.

and thereby make it free to the commerce of the country.

Next we read that "the United States built the canal, and, when the river was a highway for commerce, it was used considerably." The first part of this seritence is wholly untrue. The United States did not build the canal, it was built by the Louisvilles and Portland Canal Company. The United States, however, once owned 2,502 shares of the company's stock, but the actual cash dividends as paid into the Treasury on this stock amounted to $257,778, or $247.48 more than the Government originally paid for its stock. At present the United States has not a single dollar of proprietary interest in the canal, nor can it have until it as ecopied from the trustees on the only terms upon which they are suthorized to part with the trust. The implication that the Ohio river has ceased to be a highway of commerce is absolutely false. It may do to talk such stuff in Chicago, but we know better here. Nor have we ceased to use it is a purely its commerce is absolutely false. It may do to talk such stuff in Chicago, but we know better here. Nor have we ceased to use it is a purely interest in the canal, and the tolls derived from it are settle enormous. To say, therefore, as the Chicago Tribune does, that the canal are the Chicago Tribune does, that the canal are the Chicago Tribune does, that the canal are the Chicago Tribune does, that the canal and the proposed and the canal are the canal are of government aid, then it will be naru to find one that is. At any rate the work is certain to be done despite the discreditable misrepresentations and stupid and unwar-

this without payment in consideration or in money. He wears the dog's coller of the clique that rules the village, is not re-spected, is dependent, is poor, in nine caces out of sedoran a quasi curse to himeaces out of second a quasi cuts and a pseudo reproach to that institu-tion which, of all others, ought to be un-transmeled. Why should he, the country editor, lick the hand that brandshes the ash, and bark at the hand that is raised to

Two years ago, when we put the wretched old practice of gratuatous puffing, gotten up by candidates in their own behalf, and printed is extense by a servile press, on its true footing, the country editors very generally pronounced against us. They had not wit enough to see, or candor enough to admit, or they refused to do either, that our object was to weed out these wordy lies altogether, and that, if we succeeded, they, even more than ourselves, would be rid of a costly and dishonoring nuisance. The only construction they deigned to put upon our fight against falsehood, and our stand for the chastity of the press, was that we were in-

to be exceedingly corrupt that we should deny the Hon. BLATHERSKITE BROWNS column or two in which to puff himself and deceive the people. We per-sisted, nevertheless, not only in charging all advertising rates for the species. fall advertising rates for the space so employed, but in notifying the public of the transaction, so that no one might mistake it. The result is a notable decline in the panegyries of "many citizens" and the lofty praises heaped by "ox, populi" on their "able and talented" friend, Sauru. So much is our gain and the gain of truth and the gain of tweetpody. But it is especially the gain of the country editor, who was literally inundated with matter of the kind. He has now a means of refusing it or making it pay its way, like other advertising.

The point now under consideration is equally plain. The newspaper should be paid for publishing appointments and it should be paid for publishing the ticket of each party. It owes no gratuitous service. Its support, which it gives freely, is vastly in excess of any profit it derives.

vastly in excess of any profit it derives. Its space is, or ought to be, valuable, and paid for accordingly. This remuneration may come from candidates individually or from the general party fund-more properly from the latter. To this fund the tributes his portion, does not shoe the can didate's horse for nothing, nor the tailor, who contributes his portion, does not make the candidate's cost for nothing, no more should the editor, who has already more should the editor, who has already given as much as any one else, be required to go still further and do the party's and the candidates' advertising for nothing. Every tub should stand on its own bottom. Business is business, and whenever it becomes universally understood that the newspaper business does not differ from other business, the press will have more independent and proved.

That is all. The recolutions adopted by the Young Men's Democratic Club of this city, at its organization last Saturday evening, embody the principles of the platform upon which the Democracy of the country light the

The so-called new departure, which appeals with more than ordinary force to every man's common cense and to every man's sense of justice, is rapidly making, its way into the confidence of the people, and the day is not far distant when it will be accepted by all Democrats who sincerely desire the defeat of the Radical party and the success of their own. There is far less difference in sentiment between the two classes of Democrats than many of the Bourbons seem to suppose. Let these last read carefully the resolutions of the Young Mea's Democratic Club, and they will see that the only difference between their principles and those of the Club lies in the first sentence of this, the fifth resolution:

that, though the most unjust of all, as part of the fundamental law of the land part of the fundamental law of the land, subject to repeal only as provided in the Constitution of the United States; and, having recognized and accepted as valid the greatest of the three fraude, if they could now manage to throw saide their old-prejudices to far as to enable them to recognize and accept the other two amendments in the same way, the party would once more be united and present an unbroken front to the enemy. This we are confident a large majority of them will do long before the coming of that supreme moment when upon their co-operation moment when upon their co-opera with us will depend, in some degree, alvation of the country.

way of a joke, that an effort is being made in Wisconsin' to induce the Hon. C. C. WASHBURN to run for Governor. And telegraphed the statement all over the United States. There never was a Waste-suan yet that didn't run for every office within reach of him long before anybody ever dreamed of urging him to do so.

London Times that he was "prevented from voting for Prince ARTHUR's allow ance by his absence in Wales and Ireland." This explanation is highly graitfying to Fresident Grant, who, when he found that Loranz had not voted for the allowance, was unterly sectionaled to think that any white man could be induced to treat his brother-in-law in that way.

An Arkansas clergyman, in a letter to the Scarcy Record, speaks of the late interchange of leaden blandishment by the South and the North as "the late unoleascat war." The application of such n opprobrious epithet as "unpleasant" to o charming a little historical incident as that war was, exhibits a disregard of pop-ular feeling of which a clergyman ought to be ashamed.

In a contribution to the last numof Harper, John G. Saxe says: "As the pun is one of the oldest forms of wit, so also, in spite of its enemies, it seems likely, with whatever vicissitudes, to live as long as language it:elf." This is very true. Puns are very old indeed. Some of the very best of Saxe's ere at least forty years older than he is himself.

The Philadelphia Ledger thinks that mitrailleuses will prove of less practi-cal utility than has generally been sup-posed. This may be true, but GRANT and his New Orleans brother-in-law have clearly demonstrated that, for controlling colitical conventions, the Gatling gun, hich is the same thing as the mitrail is a first-rate thing.

The trial of the Cor aris has begun, and it is said that the prisoners seem to regard the thing as a good practical joke. To be tried for one's life, with almost a certainty of being show to the end of the trial, may be a first-rate joke of its kind; but, for our part, we would almost as soon be insulted as joked in that way. n that way.

When we look high we see some stars, and we can scarcely see them because they are dimy but if we look low we see much brighter stars, shining in a lower sphere. And those stars that strike is the least, and those that shine the brightest, have all or them their appointment from God. But these are of little consequence in comparison with the realities of true religion. For, let a person be born of God, whatever station he may fill, he will fill that state—he cannot help it say mere than the sun can help shining when the sun shines upon it—he will fill that state as a child of God, because the light of the giory of God slines in his heart through Jean Christ our Lord. He that has that light must shine as a light in the world.—[Rowland Hill.

Gore and Officer Ovens, who went into the house and captured a negro man named Andy Russell, alias Mason. While the lady was screaming in the yard the negro slipped his boots on, and, upon being quastioned as to his business in the house, replied that he was looking for a friend. It was afterward ascortained that he had gone through the house of Mr. John Goole, next door to Mr. Doera, but nothing was found upon his person that he had stolen. Upon being searched, a large, fine Preuch harp was found in his pocket, and this instrument was recognized yesterday by a gentleman living on Walanut errest, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth, who said it had been stolen from him one night last week. The negro was placed in prison, and yesterday his case, in the City Court, was continued, as it is thought more evidence will be found against him. Lieut, Gore and Mr. Owens deserve credit for this important arrest.

The Attack on the Engineers, August Wyte, a German farmer living on the outsaftris of the city, was arralgued yesterday before the City Court for stealing an engineer's level, valued ar 2000. A company of four civil oungissers, amployed by the city, were engaged in establishing the grade of a street, which ran through Mr. Wyle's cornfield. The engineers pulled up a row of corn, which so incensed Mr. Wyle that he appeared at the scene with knife in hand and made dire threats of hurting somebody. He seized the engineer's level and said that he would keep it until he got pay for the damage done his oorn. All attempted explanations that the city would pay all damages done his property did not appease his ire. He would keep the level until the claim was astiffed. Hence suit was brought before the City Court,
